

Travel Insurance

When visiting a medical institution due to illness or accidental injury, the costs can be high without insurance. Those coming to Japan for a short period without local health insurance in Japan are advised to purchase overseas travel insurance in their home country before departure.

In addition, even if you have health insurance in Japan, it may not cover medical expenses incurring during travel from overseas to Japan.

If you are concerned about accidents or illnesses while traveling, it is recommended to purchase traveler's insurance before departure. Check the coverage with your insurance company, and if it doesn't cover medical expenses for illness or injury during your stay in Japan, consider purchasing travel insurance before your visit.

Several Japanese insurance companies offer services for foreigners, providing insurance options after arrival in Japan.
